Taft Certain of Virginia.

It is very evident, howaver, that President Taft will go into the convention with Virginia's vote safe in his column. Alvah H. Martin, national committeeman, is on record in that matter. He has instructed his friends wherever located to support President Taft. Mr. Cabell, who represents the other wing, is doing the same thing, and Congressman Slemp is standing with Martin. It is doubtful, therefore, if Mr. Roosevelt will find any convention champion in Virginia. To-day the direct convention vote stands: Taft, it opposition, 0, with two delegates contested.

large. They take that view because they profess to believe that Taft will have enough votes in the convention to insure his nomination. This is the first time in the history of the purty, so far at least as it affects those now actively in politics, that such a contest has come in Republican ranks. Alckinley had easy sailing for two terms. Then Roosevelt had no opposition eight year sage, and Taft had none to speak of in 1968. With Roosevelt and active bidder for the nomination, however, it is plain to everybody that the Republicans will face the biggest battle in years, a battle which will divide the ranks and thereby increase Democratic chances. What Democratic leaders fear most is a strong and early indorsement of Taft by Roosevelt, although few expect to see anything like that.

COUNCIL ACTION

Pollard, Anderson and Levy Show How Water Supply Is Polluted and Is Dangerous.

While Virginia, of course, will continue for many years in the Democratic column, the Republican organization in this State figures largely in the national convention which must decide between President Taft and former President Roosevelt as the party nomines. Under the Republican plan in Wirginia, district conventions are held in each of the ten congressional districts, and two delegates to Chicago are elected by each of the ten. Four delegates at large will be named by the State convention, which meets in Roanoke on March 12.

Thus far only three district conventions have been held. In the Eighth the delegates were instructed for Taft, By a vote of 173 to 59, the Niath instructing for Tait, while the Brady delegates were uninstructed, that wing even refusing to indorse the Taft administration. A contest will be carried to Chicago, so in the early figuring the politicians will eliminate the Third District in making the properties of the City Council, who wanted its passage.

Foliuted and is Danigerous.

Sharp challenges to the effect that the people and commercial bodies of Richmond are not behind the bill to Prevent the pollution of streams which are the water supplies of cites, was thrown down last night at the Chamber of Commerce had not asked for the hils. Wr. Smith, chairman of the chamber's Committee hearing by S. Dabney Cronsitus, and the water supplies of cites, was thrown down last night at the Chambe committee, were present to urge the approval of the bill.

Replying to this bombshell. Assistant City Attorney George Wayne Anderson produced the joint resolution of the City Council, signed by the Mayor, calling for the enactment of the bill introduced by Senator A. C. Harman and by the Richmönd delegation in the House. Its said this made it the official action of the city, the people asking for the bill through the people asking for the bill through their representatives.

Human Life Against an Industry.

The hearing was before a joint session of the Senate Committee on Agriculture. Mining and Manufacturing, and the House Committee on General Laws. Senator Charles U. Gravatt presided. No decision was reached. City Attorney Henry R. Pollard told of the investment which Richmond has in its water plant, and the sum of $10,000 a year or more it is spending in making the water suitable for use. It seemed to be a case, he said, of life and health and happiness against an industry. A vital principle, he said, requires the protection of water used for domestic purpose as the prime necessity.

He briefly discussed the three bills—veil sentiment in the Ninth. But they are unable to see how it will be possible for Mr. Roosevelt to break the Taft hold in Virginia. Much has been made of the Brady faction's refusal to instruct for Taft at the South Richmond meeting, in view of the fact that Brady. Treat, Fligerhielmer and others are lined up with Martin. Martin, however, as subsequently shown, has urged his friends to instruct for the President, and it is not expected that any more of them will fall out of line.

Don't Believe He'll Run.

Despite his statement that his hat is already in the ring, many Republican leaders said yesterday that they did not believe Roosevelt would enter the race. They take that view because they profess to believe that Taft will have enough votes in the convention to the wills. A Contention of the mills will have enough votes in the convention to the mills.

FILED ILLNESS DETAINS CONRAD

> Unable to Deliver Address, Which Was Read in His Absence by Judge Christian.

To the portraits of eminent Virginians already in the different halls of the State Capitol was added last night, with appropriate eeremonies, the portrait of the late United States Senator John Warwick Daniel. A large audience gathered for the occasion, which was presided over by Lieutenant-Governor J. Taylor Ellyson.

"It is particularly appropriate," said Mr. Ellyson, opening the exercises at $3:15 o'clock, "that we should gather on the natal day of him whom we love to call the Father, of Our Country to do honor to another Virginian, who in his day and generation was in many respects as renowned as our first President."

Major Holmes Conrad, who had been selected by friends of the late Senator Daniel to make the address of presentation, was unable to be present because of illness, and his address, which had been forwarded, was read by Judge George L. Christian. "Mr. Christian." Said Lieutenant-Governor Elivson, in presenting him "is the Judge Christian expressed regret at the illness of Major Conrad, which, he said, was all the more unfortunate since he felt that he could not do justice to the address which he was about to read.

Honored by Colleagues.

In his address Major Conrad referred to the high esteem with which Senator Daniel was regarded by his colleagues in the Senate. Among others, he quoted this tribute from Ellin Root, then Senator from New York:

York:

"I first came to know him when the interests of the people of his State of Virginia brought him into the Department of War and into consultation with the head of the department. I do not know that in all the years of experience as head of the Department of War, and then as the head of the Department of State, which brought me into contact with so many of the strong and able men of our country, I have ever been more impressed, I doubt if I have ever been so much impressed, by the personality of any man as I was by the personality of Senator Daniel.

At the conclusion of the address, house Page Wilson Smith, of Spotsylvania, unveiled the portrait.

His Life Allegory of the South.

In accepting the portrait for the Commonwealth, Governor William Hodges Mann spoke warmly of the high character and achievements of the man to whom honor was being done, and pointed to his whole life as an allegory of the redemption of the South. Throughout the dark Reconstruction period, he said, his devotion to his country and to his political faith never faltered.

"There was a premium," said Governor Mann, "upon a change of political faith during the Reconstruction period. Sure preferment and lucrative office awaited any man who would desert the altars of his political gods. There was likewise the strong impulse in many hearts to despair of our party's future and to fear that it, like
